

Hunting Resources Across Alaska

“Whether you are hunting caribou, bear, moose or another one of our majestic game species, you are in for the experience of a lifetime. Our hunting opportunities are unmatched and our scenery is spectacular.”

—Governor Sarah Palin

It is extremely important to read and understand Alaska’s Hunting Regulations before venturing off to hunt. Every hunter is responsible for knowing the current regulations and bag limits, which may change from year to year.

Bureau of Land Management

The BLM manages most federal lands not administered by NPS, USFWS, and USFS—some 87 million acres. Virtually all of this land is open to hunting. There are some federal restrictions to use of motorized vehicles in certain areas. Visit the BLM website at <http://www.aurora.ak.blm.gov/>, or obtain additional information on hunting uses of BLM-administered lands from:

National Park Service

Contact an Alaska Public Lands Information Center (APLIC) for details about hunting on lands administered by the National Park Service.

US Geological Survey (Maps)

US Geological Survey topographic and other maps can be obtained by mail order or over the counter in several Alaska locations. Some Alaska sporting goods or outdoor stores stock high-demand maps. There are retail stores in larger Alaska communities that specialize in maps. The USGS maintains a map distribution office at Alaska Pacific University in Anchorage that can provide fast service over the counter or by mail or telephone for people out of state. In Fairbanks, hunters may obtain maps at the Geophysical Institute's Map Office.

Private Landowners

Most of Alaska's land is in public ownership and managed by federal or state agencies. However, a significant portion of the state is now in individual or corporate ownership. If you intend to hunt on private lands in Alaska, make sure you have permission from the land owner. Written permission may be required in some cases. Land use fees vary. For information on hunting on Native Corporation lands, contact the individual corporate headquarters for permission. Below you will find a list of some of the corporations who own land in areas commonly hunted by nonresidents. Please note that if you will be hunting with a guide or using the services of a transporter, they are required to have a license through the state of Alaska and should have a good working knowledge of land ownership in the area where you will be hunting.
